

The Gobi Explorer Tour

Mongolia

Overview

A short adventure for those who wish to see the great Gobi Desert in a short space of time. During this short but intensive tour, we delve deep into the Gobi Desert and become true explorers. Our first stop is at Mandalagovi.

This desert town was once home to factories during the Soviet Union period. Heading further south, we will check out the Yol Am Valley. This is located in the Gurvan Saikhan Mountain range. Before setting off on our hike, we will pay a visit to the small local natural history museum which includes strange exhibits and 10 million-year-old dinosaur eggs. During this Gobi Desert tour, we also visit the Khongor Sand Dunes, also known as the 'Singing Dunes' for the eerie noise they make when swept by the wind, as well as visiting Bayanzag.

This is otherwise known as 'Flaming Cliff's due to the rich red colouration of the clays and rocks which have been pushed up to form this landscape. All this, whilst checking out the herds of camels as we go, hiking through untouched and unexplored areas, enjoying breathtaking sunrises, and experiencing life in a Mongolia Ger tent.

Day 1

Arrival Day

AM

- No matter your arrival time, as with all our tours, the Koryo representative will be there to meet you and escort you to your hotel.

PM

- Once you've had a chance to relax, we'll head out into the city for a bit of light exploration before heading to our first group meal.

Accommodation: Hotel 9, Ulaanbaatar

Included Meals: Dinner

Day 2

Into the Gobi Desert

AM

- We'll start our adventure early as we have a long drive south towards the Gobi Desert. On the journey, we will see the lush green rolling hills of Ulaanbataar open up to the semi-arid middle Gobi region.
- Mandalagovi | For lunch, we will stop at a local restaurant in the regional capital, Mandalagovi. This desert town expanded and grew during the Soviet Union period becoming a centre of manufacturing and industry, which unfortunately declined following the collapse of the Union. These days the town is home to a large agricultural college with farming also providing the primary income regionally.
- Continuing our drive southwards, we will see more signs of desertification and herds of camels roaming the desolate desert plains.

PM

- White Stupa Cliffs | We'll cross from the middle Gobi region into the south, turning off the main highway and heading out across the desert scrub to our destination, the White Stupa Cliffs (Tsagaan Suvarga). The White Stupa Cliffs are located in the rocky Tsagaan Suvarga National Park; they are an impressive geological rock formation. Millions of years of wind, rain, and tectonic shifts have sculpted this ancient sea bed. The cliffs that have been formed, as the name suggests, resemble crumbling white Buddhist pagodas (stand even further back, and they look like a deserted city).
- Not far from the fantastic White Stupa Cliffs, we find our ger camp accommodation tonight, out in the desert; once we have checked in, you'll be able to enjoy a welcome drink and view your first Gobi sunset.

Accommodation: Local Ger Camp

Included Meals: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner

Day 3

An Adventure in Eagle Valley

AM

- For those who watched the sunset the previous day, you may wish to complete the set and wake for the desert sunrise; alternatively, snuggle up in your duvet and enjoy the warmth of your ger.
- Dalanzadgad | After breakfast, we'll depart the camp and continue southwards to the city of Dalanzadgad. Dalanzadgad is the regional capital at the heart of South Gobi Province and the region where we will be spending much of the following days.
- Dalanzadgad has a population of around 70,000, although it never feels like it since this settlement in the desert always appears empty with a wild west frontier feel to it. We'll stop for a spot of lunch and stock up on road snacks before driving on to our main highlight of the day Yol Am Valley.

PM

- Yol Am Valley | A relatively short drive from Dalanzadgad finds us at the famed Yol Am Valley (Vulture Valley); this narrow canyon is located in southern Mongolia's Gurvan Saikhan Mountain Range. Before beginning our hike, we will visit the small local natural history museum; this quirky museum is quite interesting as it houses some of the region's paleontological finds in the shape of ten million-year-old dinosaur eggs.
- We begin our adventure at the valley's wide entrance, following the small river into the canyons, narrowing cliffs eventually. As the step-sided walls cut the sun from the canyon's bottom, we will catch a glimpse of the locally famous frozen river. Over the winter months, the river builds up a thick layer of ice, which thaws slowly and, at times, remains long into the summer months. As you follow the winding path, eagles rise to circle in the thermals high above the canyon whilst wild goats can be seen perched on the high valley walls and picas scurry amongst the rocky terrain.
- For those who may have used all of their energy climbing the dunes yesterday, there are plenty of horses for rent at the entrance of the canyon.

Accommodation: Local Ger Camp

Included Meals: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner

Day 4

The Singing Dunes of Khongoryn Els

AM

- Khongor Sand Dunes | The adventure continues as we board our vehicles and journey onwards through the wilds of the Gobi Desert heading deeper into its sandy clutches to the Khongor Sand Dunes (Khongoryn Els), also known as the Singing Sands. We pass some of the typical Gobi terrain along the route, a mix of loose pebbles, gravel, and fine sand. As we journey, we will cross a fertile area of the steppe where we'll be sure to visit one of the traditional nomadic families who call this desolate region home.
- The Khongor Sand Dunes, as the name suggests, are a dune system found within the Gobi; as only around 3% of the Gobi desert is covered in sand, the sight of these 300-metre-high gigantic dunes is something to behold. The shifting sands of Khongoryn Els stretch out for over 180 km, although we arrive in the most impressive area and stay at a Ger camp with views across these giants.

PM

- Once we have eaten lunch and waited for the day to cool a little, we'll continue our adventure and visit one of Khongor's resident camel herder families. Although most of these herder families are now in this region to supply camels to tourists, we can think of no better way to approach these monstrous sandy giants. After arriving, we will have time enough to climb and explore the dunes; it may take a little longer than you think to climb the impressive dunes.
- If you are fortunate, you may also experience why they have been named the singing dunes, as when the wind blows across the sand's surface in the right direction, an eerie sound is emitted, sounding like an aircraft to some and a hidden being to others.
- Another day nearing its end, but as with much of the Gobi Desert's natural scenery, the Khongor Dunes come alive at sunset. Perhaps view the area from the top of the dunes or the comfort of our relaxing Ger camp while enjoying a cold drink after dinner.

Accommodation: Local Ger Camp

Included Meals: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner

Day 5

To the Flaming Cliffs

AM

- Aimags | The Gobi Desert is vast and our foray onto its plains today only gives us a snippet of its actual size; the Gobi Desert reaches into six Mongolian provinces (Aimags) and even crosses into China. The Gobi is the sixth-largest desert globally and the second in Asia. A wide-open place of extremes; our stop for today is perhaps one of the most well-known.
- Flaming Cliffs | Our main destination for today, Bayanzag – (the Flaming Cliffs), is stunningly beautiful with its flame-coloured sandstone cliffs and canyons. Aside from its obvious wow factor, Bayanzag is also where American palaeontologist Roy Chapman Andrews first discovered the world's first-ever fossilised dinosaur eggs and a mighty haul of various other fossils. A walk along the cliffs here is a walk in the footsteps of the man whom Indiana Jones was modelled on!

PM

- Bayanzag | We will also take a walk amongst the lower regions of Bayanzag, nicknamed by some as Mongolia's answer to the Grand Canyon; they haven't visited the canyon however since Bayanzag doesn't resemble the Grand Canyon but is truly a marvel in its own right. The lower areas of the cliffs offer us breathtaking views of the enflamed rock face and reflect the cliff's more local name, Bayanzag. Bayanzag translates to "rich in saxaul shrubs" which sounds a little odd until you find these peculiar spindly shrubs sprouting from the desert floor, creating a strange and otherworldly feel to the area.
- Once we have finished our exploration, it's off to the nearby Ger camp where we can relax, drink, and maybe return to the cliffs to catch the changing colours as sunsets, making a perfect end to an exciting day.

Accommodation: Local Ger Camp

Included Meals: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner

Day 6

A Nomadic Drive

AM

- For those early risers today, you may wish to view the changing colours of the flaming cliffs once again; this time, sunrise offers the opportunity and is said to be the best time, to see the true beauty of this famous geological formation.
- Baga Gazriin Chuluu | Following breakfast, we make our way across the country, continuing our journey to an area known as Baga Gazriin Chuluu. The trip will take us across typical Gobi scrub, transitioning into the more famed and well-known traditional Mongolian steppe.
- As we approach Baga Gazriin Chuluu, it comes as a real surprise a red granite outcrop of rocks rises to 1768 metres above sea level in the middle of the flat, featureless Mongolian steppe.
- Baga Gazriin Chuluu is designated a national park home to 20 rare species of plant, ibex, marmot and mountain sheep. The area offers us impressive geology and the chance to explore this and more with some good hikes, which also encompass some of the ancient petroglyphs and burial mounds found in the area.

PM

- Nomadic Herders | Should time permit on our journey, we will also have time to interact with a few more local nomadic herders who will also be passing through the region (just on a longer journey). Time permitting, we'll stop for the ubiquitous cup of milky tea before continuing on our own adventure.
- Once at the ger camp, for those who wish, there may be the opportunity for some optional horse riding, a great location to experience a ride out on a true Mongolian steed.

Accommodation: Local Ger Camp

Included Meals: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner

Day 7

Return to Ulaanbaatar

AM

- Drive to Ulaanbaatar | After an early morning start, we say a fond farewell to Mongolia's southern region and drive back to the bustling capital Ulaanbaatar.
- Gandan Monastery | However, our tour isn't over as we're off into the city to explore some of Ulaanbaatar's must-see sites, the first stop at Gandan Monastery.
- Gandan Monastery is Ulaanbaatar's largest and most impressive Buddhist monastery; the complex is comprised of varying temples from different periods; one of the highlights is viewing the 26-meter-high gold-coated indoor Buddha.

PM

- National Museum of Mongolian History | From temple to museum, we'll head further into the city and stop at the National Museum of Mongolian History to see artefacts from Mongolia and Central Asia dating as far back as the Stone Age to the present day. From there, it's a short jaunt back across the square to the comfort of our hotel, where you'll have the chance to wash the Gobi sand from your hair before relaxing, shopping and preparing for our last group meal together.

Accommodation: Hotel in Ulaanbaatar

Included Meals: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner

Day 8

Departure Day

AM

- We end our adventure in the morning, with transfers to the airport for international flights. Pack your souvenirs, your dirty clothes and your memories, and have a safe trip home!

Included Meals: Breakfast
